

The first part of the document is a prologue or introduction. It is written in a formal, legalistic style. The text is dense and contains many references to laws, regulations, and administrative procedures. The language is somewhat archaic and difficult to read, especially for someone not familiar with the specific legal system being referenced. The document appears to be a formal decree or a set of instructions issued by a high-ranking official or government body.

The second part of the document is a list of names and titles. It is organized into several columns. The names are written in a formal, serif font. Some of the names are preceded by titles or honorifics. The list appears to be a roster of officials, members of a committee, or individuals involved in a specific project or legal case. The text is somewhat faded and difficult to read, but the structure is clear.
